QUIET ELECTION

J. HOWELL CROSBY ELECTED REPRESENTATIVE BY A HANDSOME MAJORITY.

Certainly a more ideal day for the annual state election could not have been asked for than that of Tuesday last. Promptly at six o'clock, after the inspectors, George H. Peirce, James J. Mahoney; ballot clerks, Edgar Crosby, Thomas J. Robinson; tellers, Thomas Hogan, Stephen B. Wood, Winthrop Pattee, F. B. Records, Jr., F. Brown, F. F. Russell, Charles P. Ladd, Jr., Timothy O'Brien, had been sworn in, the polls were opened, and from that time on until the closing of the polls the voting was light. The town committee had used every effort to draw the citizens to the polls, but owing to the election being confined to one side, and the voters knowing the results sure to follow, they became disinterested and gave the polls a wide berth; certainly not very Americanlike in this grand country where the free ballot should be used, not forsaken. At noon about four hundred votes had been cast, and was a sure sign the vote would be light.

The use of carriages were not needed to any extent, only in cases where the party was sick or disabled. There was hardly any sign of an election going on, the usual crowds about the Town Hall being among the missing to a large extent. At 4:30 o'clock the polls were closed and then commenced the tedious task of sorting and counting. After the closing of the polls and the tellers had retired to count the ballots, Selectman Edwin S. Farmer called the meeting to order and announced that the election of a moderator was in order. Mr. Warren W. Rawson was chosen, and in accepting the same thanked those present for having conferred this honor upon him the eleventh consecutive year, said that he should not accept said office another again. Mr. W. W. Kimball made a motion to adjourn. Mr. William G. Peck added that the adjournment be to next Tuesday, Nov. 15, and that all articles in the warrant be taken up at that meeting. The vote to adjourn was then taken. It was nearly six o'clock when Mr. Farmer announced the result of the voting, which was as follows:

Governor.
Alexander B. Bruce, D.	121
George R. Pearce, S. L. P.	2
Winfield P. Porter, D. S.	1
Samuel P. Shapleigh, P.	1

Henry G. Cushing, R. D.	513
Representative in Congress.
Samuel W. McCall, R.	531
George A. Perkins, D.	136
William E. Stacy, S. L. P.	3

Our new Representative, J. Howell Crosby, received the highest number of votes cast, 595, and was certainly flattering, as only 704 voted. The people have elected a Representative who will, in every way, look and work for the best interests of the town, and not only for the town but for the whole state; he will be a credit and honor to this town.

HELPFUL.

There was a large audience present at the Christian Endeavor meeting in the vestry of the Pleasant Street Congregational Church, last Sunday evening, to hear Mr. George W. Averell, Superintendent of the Children's Health Fund speak on the object and aims of the association. He talked most interestingly for the greater part of an hour telling of the formation and growth of the society and describing many of his own personal experiences in carrying on the work, and the earnest and impressive manner in which he sought to impress the great need of this work in Boston, could not fail to have its effect upon his audience. Besides removing children from homes whose influence would be detrimental to their moral welfare, and placing them in Christian families; the society aids them in their own homes, sends some of the most needy into the country for a vacation, takes others on short trips to the beaches near Boston, and finally provides many unfortunate little ones with a bountiful dinner at Thanksgiving and Christmas. He told several pathetic incidents which had come under his observation, speaking particularly of the great pity which he felt for those whom he termed "little fathers and mothers of the poor;" boys and girls of tender years who had the entire charge of the little ones of the family. At the close of the talk a collection was taken for the benefit of the organization. Mr. Averell was accompanied by a choir of rescued children who sang several selections very sweetly before and after the exercises.

WEDDING.

SHIRLEY-CRANDALL.
The residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Crandall at Stow, Mass., was the scene of a very pretty home wedding on the noon of Wednesday, Nov. 9th, when the eldest daughter, Miss Inez, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward C. Shirley of Walnut street, Arlington. The house was prettily decorated with autumn foliage and ferns, the greatest simplicity being maintained throughout. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Thomas C. Jackson of the Maynard Congregational church. Mr. George Shirley of this town, a brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Miss Mabel Crandall, sister of the bride, as maid of honor. After a wedding dinner, and receiving the congratulations of the relatives present, the young couple left for their new home at 26 Walnut street, Arlington, where they will be at home to their friends on Thursdays in December.

HISTORICAL MEETING.

On Monday evening of this week the Arlington Historical Society held its regular monthly meeting in Pleasant Hall, on Maple Street, and certainly it was a most enjoyable occasion. It carried one back to the real old-fashioned Thanksgivings we used to attend. Mrs. Matthew Fletcher, of Bedford, formerly a resident of this town, read an extremely interesting paper on the "Thanksgiving of Our Grandfathers." Mrs. Fletcher is a highly interesting speaker, her delivery being excellent. She gave a history of the Thanksgiving Day from its earliest time down to the present. And she spoke enthusiastically of the latter days when she attended this festival day at her grandfather's house, and sat down to the table burdened with the good things this day brings forth—the big, plump turkey, chicken pie, the immense rich plum pudding, the delicious mince and pumpkin pie. At this time a huge pumpkin, pie, measuring 18 inches in diameter was brought out and distributed among the 90 persons present. We should judge it was a good one by the way those present ate it. The pie was made by the Misses Winn of Summer Street. It proved so acceptable that a vote of thanks was given the makers by the society. As a whole it was the most enjoyable meeting yet held by the society. The next meeting will be in December, when it is expected that Mr. E. N. Blake will read a paper.

WAX WORKS.

For some time past there has been a feeling among the members of the Unitarian Church that it would be desirable to add some standard reference books on Unitarianism to the Sunday School library. In order to procure the funds necessary to do this, it was announced a short time ago that there would be an exhibition of Mrs. Jarley's wax works in the vestry of the church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 9, to which a small admission fee would be charged. As some time has elapsed since this famous collection was last seen in Arlington there was a good sized audience present to greet the sprightly old lady and her famous collection, many of the little folks especially taking advantage of an opportunity they may never have again. Miss Grace Gage assumed the character of Mrs. Jarley, the bustling, good natured and garrulous proprietor of the wax works, and sustained the part in a most pleasing manner, her vivacity and nimble wit holding her audience to the end. The able assistants, Peter and John, represented respectively by Mr. W. H. N. Francis and William T. Foster, Jr., were much in evidence, and the assiduous care which they bestowed upon the models, winding up the machinery which was supposed to control their automatic gestures, tenderly dusting them off and carefully oiling creaking joints where occasion required, convulsed those present. All of the characters deserve great praise for the general excellence of their work, but several merit special mention. The undoubted hit of the evening was Mr. Edward Bailey's representation of a rough rider arrayed in campaign uniform mounted upon a saw horse and brandishing a sabre. Mr. Gaylord Brackett's impersonation of Madam Melba, with its musical accompaniment provoked much laughter, as did the appearance of Captain Kidd and his many times victim. Miss Maud Pierce made a stately May queen, and Mr. Bullard's portrayal of the late lamented Mr. Jarley was capital. The pianist played most appropriate selections throughout the evening, executing "Her golden hair was hanging down her back" while the Fair one with golden locks was on exhibition and "The Bowery" when the two headed girl made her appearance. The affair was a financial as well as a social success, clearing over forty dollars for the object in view, and reflects great credit on Miss Gage who had charge of the arrangements. Following is the complete list of characters and actors:

BOAT CLUB.

The pool tournament closed Thursday evening, and had 15 names on the list, as follows: Messrs. A. G. Wilmot, W. Pattee, R. T. Hardy, B. Barnum, G. B. C. Rugg, G. H. Childs, H. A. Goodham, A. Livingstone, B. W. Rankin, C. H. Carter, H. E. Stratton, Arthur Crosby, Harry Bates, H. L. Dexter, Jr., Walter Stimpson. From present indications the tournament will be an interesting one, and will start the first of the week.

The pool tables have been recovered, received new cushions, and are now in excellent shape.

New billiard balls have been purchased.

The janitor has housed nearly all the boats.

At the present time everything is quiet, but before long the various contests will liven things up.

It is worth all one pays to be a member of the Boat Club. The charges of the games are very moderate; the reading room is a cosy place to sit in and contains the best reading matter; and during the winter there are entertainments of a high order, and smoke talks; so it can be seen there is plenty of enjoyment for the winter months.

FULL SUPPORT.

From first to last the Enterprise has been the only paper to honestly and manfully support our newly elected Representative. It was a well-known fact that there would be no opposition in this district, consequently there was not the usual interest taken. This, however, should not have made the campaign any the less interesting. A most strenuous effort was made by the town committee to induce the voters to come out. It was, we believed, the duty of the press to bring in as close a touch as possible the candidate with the people. It remained with the peoples' paper, the Enterprise, to do this. In this we feel we have done our whole duty; and as in this so it will be in campaigns which will follow. We will have the courage of our convictions to speak out freely, to take a firm stand, irrespective of party, and give unflinching support which will be for the best interest of the town. Petty grievances and personal spite will never be allowed to crop into these columns. However great our likes or dislikes we will never show them in print, but will work hard for a candidate, should he be the best, even though we had a personal grievance; this is true journalism.

It has been a pleasure, week by week, to say a friendly word for Mr. J. Howell Crosby, and we certainly were more than pleased to have him elected to this honorable position. We were with the majority, and knew he was in every way fitted for the position he now occupies; he was the peoples' candidate. And now that he is elected we know the future of Arlington is safe in his hands so far as lies in his power. His past record in various town offices bears us out in this. At this time we extend our hearty congratulations to Mr. J. Howell Crosby. This public office as a public trust is well filled.

There will be important measures to come up in the House this winter which will require considerable study and forethought to meet them fairly and squarely, but at these times Mr. Crosby will be found defending the side of right at whatever cost.

Shall we or shall we not make an appropriation for the new boulevard is to be an all absorbing topic for discussion next Tuesday evening at the Town hall. There are various ways of looking at this all-important question. It is true it would be a nice thing to have the project carried out; in fact it would no doubt be beneficial to the town. A handsome drive way around the shores of Spy Pond would enhance the value of property in this section quite largely; in fact property would increase in value the whole length of the boulevard; it might instill new life into building; it would make that section of Chestnut street near the cemetery more beautiful, as the now swampy land could be filled in and at this point the change would be gladly welcomed. But with our already large debt would it be wise to increase it. Would the increased valuation and new residences be enough to allow this expenditure. If so, by all means carry it out. We are in favor of anything that will be beneficial to the town, anything that will enhance its future value and will not put a stumbling block in the way. Winchester has benefited by it, so they tell us. The citizens of the town have a good chance to argue this question on Tuesday next, and say whether it is or is not to be.

Voters, turn out and take an interest and see if it is wise. We ought to have it if it will not incumbrance the town to largely.

In the death of Hon. David A. Wells of Norwich, Ct., the country has lost one of its greatest economists. He was a grand, good man, one who knew he was in the right. He was ever ready to lend a helping hand to the oppressed, and his main endeavor was to lift up depraved and fallen humanity. Mr. Wells was personally known by us and therefore we were able to see and know his daily life. It will be hard to find another his equal.

'Tis evident Judge Van Wyck feels rather tired just now. His defeat was a crushing one and no mistake. It was a toss up who would win, with Roosevelt on the short side, but politics are queer and oftentimes the unexpected occurs. Well, we are pretty sure Col. Roosevelt will make a good governor, but in order to do so he must first shake the Platt followers.

'Twas a grand game of foot ball on Soldiers' field last Saturday, between Harvard and Princeton. The odds were against the crimson, but their pluck and skill won for them a great victory.

That is a disgraceful state of affairs now prevailing in Wilmington, N. C., where the colored editor of a paper has had his office sacked and burned and been ordered out of town. Incidentally eight negroes were shot down in the streets by the white citizens, whom the newspaper reports represent "as being determined to preserve order."

Election time is a better stimulant than medicine. It for a time takes the business man's attention from his arduous task and relieves him from the hard strain, while he seeks to run his friend for office. While this is no slight task, yet it is a diversion and full of amusement—for the people at least.

It seems as though "Teddy" was to cope with more trouble in the near future. The question now is, is he or is he not eligible for governorship. Tammany, having lost heavily, will try to snatch away the glory if possible. Will they do it?

The defeat of Hon. J. H. Walker of Worcester, was unexpected. It is not always best to be too sure; eternal vigilance is the price of re-election.

Cong. McCall of the eighth district received a handsome vote and returns to the House again next year. Mr. McCall is the right man in the right place.

California has gone Republican. Well, that is nothing strange. Ever since the days of '49 the inhabitants of that State have had a fondness for the yellow metal.

Teddy Roosevelt is quite a "Rough Rider." Wonder if he will be able to ride over William McKinley for the Republican nomination in 1900. Who knows?

"Enjoy yourselves!" ye defeated political aspirants for office—eat crow.

Who said it would be any different in this state.

Our congratulations, Mr. Crosby.

Krebs and Barrows also ran.

One good turn deserves anothe, Mr. McCall.

"Yes" exclaimed the old lady with a very supercilious air, "my daughters are going to the theatre tonight to see Shakespeare's 'Turning of the screw.'"

Knowledge grows, but man stands still; that is to say the intellect and powers of man are no greater now than they were in the days of Homer, of Confucius, of Buddha, or of Moses.

Some one asks "Hasn't Veritas got Lexington meadows on the brain?" He is able to reply in the affirmative; he has got Lexington meadows not only "on the brain" but in every fibre of his body and in every fibre of his linen.

"Literature is the wine of life; it is not, it cannot be its food. The former parches one's nature and renders him discontented and despicable. The rose in its full-blown fragrance is the glory of the fields; but there must be a soil and stem and leaves, or there will be no rose."

Party spirit is hostile to moral independence. A man in proportion as he drinks it in, sees, hears, judges by the senses and understandings of his party. He surrenders the freedom of a man, the right of using and speaking his own mind, and echoes the applauses or maledictions which passionate partisans see fit to utter.

If the earth were a hollow sphere of uniform density and thickness (no matter what the thickness of the shell may be) a person placed anywhere within the cavity would weigh nothing, yet he could not move his body an inch; but he could lift another body weighing one hundred tons. Will some High School pupil please explain this paradox?

The curse of England is the obstinate determination of the middle classes to make their sons what they call gentlemen. So we are overrun by clergymen, without livings; lawyers without briefs; physicians without patients; clerks soliciting employment who might have thriven, and been above the world, as bakers, watchmakers, or inn-keepers." Macaulay (1833).

In the department of the British Museum devoted to the Library of George III is a Bible in the Latin language, said to be the earliest complete printed book. It is called the Mazarine Bible, because it was found in the library of Cardinal Mazarine. It is supposed to have issued from the press of Gutenberg and Faust at Mentz, about 1455. It has elaborately ornamental letters in colors at the beginning of chapters.

The following is a sample of the fetters not unfrequently received by the Post-Master-General:
To the General Post Office London

I right these few lines asking you if you will be so kind as to tell me such a person living in England. She was living in Birmingham last Christmas this his sister. She hant in Birmingham now. Let this letter go to every general post office there is

"Scratch a Russian and you have a Tartar." Look at your civilized man when fired by that strange magnetic impulse which passion arouses in crowds, and you may read in his eyes the blind fury of the Malay running amuck. There is not lacking evidence that our country is filled with combustible material. It needs perhaps only some sand-hill Kearney to lash it into fury. Can our country bear the strain that must inevitably ensue from the naturalization of ten hundred millions of Malays?

When in Paris I rode on an omnibus to the Hotel des Invalides. When I alighted a man promptly stepped up to me and asked me in perfect English if I would have a guide. I asked him "How did you know that I speak English? I have not spoken a word for an hour, either in English or bad French." "Oh I can pick out an Englishman in a crowd of 500 men. But you are an American." "Yes, my friend," I replied, "I do not doubt it, for you have just given me sufficient evidence of your skill. But I ask how do you do it?" "Oh by his physique" he replied: I did not care to probe his secret further, but I have come to the conclusion that guides and beggars in Europe are endowed with a sixth sense; a sense that enables them to size up a stranger with unerring precision and not only to determine his nationality but to fathom his gullibility and his pockets. On the Continent they pay little homage to an Englishman. They have little regard for the one penny; but they have a decided penchant for American halves and quarters, and they well understand how willing the American is to part with them.

There appears to be some diversity of opinion as to whether the English sparrow drives our native birds from their accustomed haunts. The sparrows are numerous, noisy, and sometimes aggressive, but appear to quarrel much more among themselves than with other species of birds. They are with us throughout the year, and are companions of the snow-bird, woodpecker, chickadee, etc. Robins have been more numerous this year than for many years and so have many other species of birds. Sparrows delight to feed on soft grains. It is a pleasant diversion to scatter grains and seeds about our dwellings during the winter months and watch the antics of the winged tribe.

In the Royal Albert Hall of the South Kensington Museum, London, may be found the oldest locomotive engine in existence. It was called the "Puffing Billy" and was constructed in 1813. Near it stands the "Rocket" with which George Stephenson won the prize in the memorable contest on the 6th of October, 1829. This was the contest that decided the fate of the locomotive. Near the Rocket stands the "Sans Pareil" one of the three competitors at this trial. In the same hall, and in close proximity stands various types of modern locomotives. Beside the latter the former look like toys. In my limited travels in Europe I have seen nothing that interested me so much, and I advise every one that visits London to go to the South Kensington Museum if for no other purpose than to see these pioneers of railroad travel.

Passing through a short street leading from Court street to Sudbury street in Boston I saw a few days ago a young man lying in a door-way in a gross state of intoxication. He was besmeared from head to foot with such mud as this street affords. One half of his face was as black as that of a black-cork minstrel. Probably he had recently been thrown or kicked out of some grog-shop not far distant. I "passed by on the other side." A little later I passed through the same street again. This time I found him in the custody of a "good samaritan." Another young man "passing that way had taken pity on him" and got him to the back door of a kitchen near by and was holding him with difficulty with one hand against a brick wall, and with the other hand was sponging his face with water brought in a bucket by a saintly cook. Now in the kingdom-to-come what seats will this samaritan, the bartender, and I be individually entitled to?

Nearly every substance can exist in a solid, a liquid, or in a gaseous state. In which of these three states a given substance exists depends upon the temperature and the pressure to which it is subjected. For example water under ordinary atmospheric pressure and at a temperature between 32° F and 212° F is in a liquid state. Above 212° it is a gas or a vapor. Below 32° it is a solid. In a vacuum, i. e. when it is under no pressure it is a gas regardless of temperature; in other words water cannot exist in a solid or a liquid state without pressure. An iron pot is a frozen body. At 2880° F iron is a liquid under ordinary pressure. At a still higher pressure it is a gas. The spectroscopist finds that iron gas is one of the constituents of the sun's atmosphere. At the temperature of 39° below F-zero mercury becomes a solid and our mercurial thermometers become useless. Pictet, the man who first succeeded in changing air to a liquid, a few years ago struck a medal weighing 33 lbs. of solidified mercury.

The most remarkable achievement in civil engineering on record was that accomplished in the boring of the St. Gothard Tunnel in Switzerland. This tunnel is 48,750 ft (about 9 1/2 miles) long. The summits of some of the mountains bored are so steep and high that it was impracticable to trace a line over the mountains. The relative position of the two openings and the direction of the tunnel had to be calculated indirectly by a system of triangulations. The borings were conducted simultaneously at both extremities of the projected tunnel. Communication was opened between the two galleries on the 29th of February, 1880. The actual length of the tunnel was about twenty-five feet shorter than the calculated length. The difference of level of the two galleries was four inches, and their lateral deviation was eight inches.

The following excerpts from Senator Hoar's recent speech are commended to the thoughtful reader: "The first duty of the American people is to themselves. I believe that the highest service the American people can render to mankind and to liberty is to preserve unstained and unchanged the republic as it came to us from the fathers. In my opinion we are today in a great danger—a greater danger than we have encountered since the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth. The danger is that we are to be transformed from a republic founded on the Declaration of Independence, guided by the counsels of Washington—the hope of the poor, the refuge of the oppressed—into a vulgar, commonplace empire founded upon physical force, subject races and vassal states, in which inevitably one class must forever rule and other classes must forever obey. Human beings—men women, and children, peoples—are not to be won as spoils of war or prizes in battle. It may be that such a doctrine finds a place in the ancient and barbarous laws of war. But it has no place where the Declaration of Independence is a living reality. If the Philippine Islands become ours, then under the late decision of the Supreme Court every child hereafter born in them becomes an American citizen, free to come, free to go. Are you going to multiply by ten the size of your navy? Are you going to have a standing army which must amount, in my judgment, to hundreds of thousands in number? Are you going to increase many fold your national debt? Is every American child hereafter to be born, as in Europe, with an armed soldier upon his back and a mortgage of $500 about his little neck?

In the summer of 1885 I was present at the Sabbath morning services in Spurgeon's Tabernacle in London. I was told that the seating capacity of the auditorium was 6000, but this seemed to me an exaggeration. Every seat was filled and many were turned away. Two galleries completely encircled the temple. There was no pulpit. The speaker stood in the first gallery at one end of the temple and a portion of his audience was almost directly over his head. There was an elevated platform directly in front and below the speaker for the deaf. The interior and exterior of the temple was very plain. The speaker, Mr. Spurgeon, was short, and stubby, and of dark complexion. He wore a beard and short moustache, slightly tinged with gray. There was no instrumental music, but the congregational singing was such as almost to lift you from your feet. Every stanza was read by Spurgeon before it was sung. While reading the Scriptures he expounded every sentence. His prayer was plain, direct, earnest, and free from rhetorical flourishes. His text was from 1 John III, 21, "Beloved if our hearts condemn us not, then have we boldness toward God." His sermon like his prayer was plain and free from the sensational. There was no ranting or Fultonism. He did not move two steps from his standing place just back of the railing. Perhaps because I was expecting something very different (having been in those days an occasional attendant at Tremont Temple); his sermon did not at first impress me as that of a great preacher. But before it was done I felt intensely that it was good to be there. I never received so much light in one sermon. It was an eye-opener and a heart-revealer. A man, no matter how great a sinner, was made to feel that there is hope for him and not simply hope, but there is a sure way, plain and not hedged with difficulties and uncertainties.

The name of the discoverer of the present mode of making shot was Watts. Previous to his discovery the process of manufacture was a tedious one. Bars of lead were pounded into sheets of a thickness nearly equal to the diameter of the shot required. These sheets were then cut into little cubes, placed in a revolving barrel, and rotated until by constant friction, the edges and corners wore off from the cubes and they became spheroids. Watts after spending an evening in over-indulgence with some companions in an ale house, went home, went to bed, and soon fell asleep. His slumbers, however, were disturbed by unwelcome dreams, in one of which he was out with "the boys," and as he was stumbling home it began to rain shot-beautiful globules of polished shining lead in such numbers that he and his companions had to seek shelter. In the morning Watts, remembered his curious dream and it obtruded itself on his mind all day. He began to wonder what shape molten lead would assume in falling through the air, and finally, to set his mind at rest he ascended to the steeple of a church and dropped slowly and regularly a ladleful of molten lead into the moat below. Descending, he took from the bottom of the shallow pool several handfuls of the most beautiful shot he had ever seen. From this exploit emanated the idea of a "shot tower."

ARLINGTON LOCALS.

The smoke talk of Division 43 takes place next Tuesday, Nov. 15, and a pleasant time is expected.

The Arlington Fife and Drum Corps was out Monday evening practicing martial music.

Congregational C. E. meets in vestry of church at 6.30 p. m. Subject "Christian Recreation." Leader, Rev. S. C. Bushnell.

Camp 45 will hold its annual inspection next Thursday evening, and a good time is expected. Members please turn out in goodly numbers.

In the Cambridge Court last Saturday the Arlington House proprietor pleaded guilty to charges of the liquor being found on the premises and paid a fine of $100.

Through the courtesy of Mr. J. Howell Crosby, a large delegation of Arlington citizens went to Boston Tuesday evening to hear the election returns at Music Hall.

Miss Buhler makes an excellent editor for the Clarion, and Mr. Jules White has ably handled its management, having received fine support from his assistant, Mr. George F. S. Bartlett.

Messrs. A. A. Tilden, C. A. Sunergren and Bart Hill left last Sunday for Menotomy camp in Maine for a two weeks' hunting trip. It is their intention to not remain at the camp the entire time, but to go farther north. We shall expect some great things on their return.

Mr. William H. Nolan is improving slowly from his severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, and hopes to be out again in a few days. The hard work required of him during the past few years on the Globe, finally told, and it will be some time before he regains his full health.

Mr. Warren W. Rawson has very kindly offered his palms, rubber plants, ferns, etc., to New Division 43 for use at their dance Thanksgiving eve, and the members feel greatly indebted to him and wish to express their thanks through these columns. The decorations this year will be on an elaborate scale, and no time or pains will be spared to make this occasion an enjoyable one.

From present indications there will be much activity in local Christian Endeavor circles this winter. Already plans are being made for a debate to be held in the Chapel at Arlington Heights sometime in December, and there will probably be a union social held at the Baptist church in January. Both events will be under the auspices of the local C. E. Union.

Mr. Harold Rice, Mr. William D. Elwell, and Mr. H. Maxwell Brooks have issued invitations for a series of select dancing parties to be held in Town Hall this winter on the evenings of November 26, December 23, 1898, and February 21, 1899. The matrons will be Mrs. H. H. Homer, Mrs. George R. Dwyer, Mrs. W. A. Taft, and Mrs. S. F. Hicks. The music will be furnished by Nutter's orchestra of Cambridge.

The semi-monthly meeting of the C. L. S. C. was held with Mrs. Gooding Nov. 7 with the president, Mrs. Blake, in the chair. The meeting was called to order at 3.15. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and the roll call was responded to by readings from English authors. Mrs. Stearns read a chapter on "The hillside spring and its work," from Winchell's work on geology. Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Roberts gave a dramatic reading from Shakespeare (King Lear), Miss Simpson read from Europe in the 19th century. Mrs. Roberts read an article on "Our new colonies" to be, the Philippines," from Chautauqua Magazine. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Stearns, No. 1 Belknap place, Monday, Nov. 21. The roll call will be selections from American authors relating to the season.

On Monday evening, between nine and ten o'clock, while an electric was passing the monument at the junction of Mass. avenue and Broadway, an Italian swung off the car, and in so doing fell on his knees, breaking the knee cap and badly injuring his side. The man was taken into Mr. Grannan's undertaking rooms and Dr. Charles A. Keegan was immediately summoned. Upon his arrival he found also the man had two of his ribs bent in, and the doctor, with the aid of Mr. Thomas A. Dineen, Mr. Grannan's able assistant, put the knee in splints and ordered his removal to the Mass. General Hospital, Boston. Mr. Dineen conveyed the man there about midnight.

We have carefully followed the plans of sewer construction carried out by Supt. Pond the past season, and we do not hesitate to say, with no intention of flattery, that the work under his charge has been in every way satisfactory. Mr. Pond believes in doing everything the best he knows how; he is a very capable engineer and a conscientious worker. A large amount of work has been done by this department this year. Arlington can well feel proud in having the right man in the right place. His success, in part, lies in the fact that he has the utmost confidence and respect of those under him. It is interesting to look over the various work on hand in different parts of the town and to have him explain the workings of each.

Mr. Edward H. Bartlett of Pleasant street, is confined to his home with a severe illness.

Div. 23 realized about $143.00 from their annual ball. This will go into the relief fund to be used for sick and disabled members.

The Baptist C. E. will meet in the church vestry on Sunday evening next at 6.30 o'clock. Miss Georgiana Sawyer will be the leader, and "Christian recreation" will be the topic.

Coal, wood! Coal, wood! Order now. Prices advancing. Room 20 Post-office building, Arlington.

The change of time in the public school sessions began on Monday. The forenoon session will close at 11.30, and the afternoon session opens at 1.30 and closes at 3.30.

The ladies' night of Arlington Council, K. of C., was largely attended by its members and friends last evening. The first of the evening was spent in a social game of whist after which there was dancing until about one o'clock. These ladies' nights are making the council very popular.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Nelson Blake left their home last Thursday morning for a short visit to Mrs. Blake's father, Mr. Whitten of Wolfboro, N. H.

Rev. J. M. Mulcahy is having the hollow adjoining the St. Joseph School filled in with the gravel taken from Mr. Sherburne's cellar which is being dug on Mass. avenue. It will be a great improvement.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo W. White met with an accident on Sunday last while out for a drive. Their horse ran away, and when near the residence of Mr. W. W. Rawson the shaft broke and they were thrown out, the buggy turning completely over. Mr. White escaped with slight injury, but Mrs. White was badly injured.

Supt. of Streets Samuel E. Kimball is filling in on Mystic street, near the centre, with crushed stone and covering with gravel to be rolled down with the steam roller. It is a pity the appropriation could not have been large enough to have finished Broadway. It is a disgrace to the town at the lower end.

Yerxa and Yerxa are making a fine display of a new lot of canned goods at their store in the P. O. Building this week. Attention should be called especially to the fine line of preserved fruits and jams bottled by the famous firm of Curtice Bros. of Rochester, N. Y. They are also showing a nice lot of new raisins and citron. Courteous attention to customers insisted upon.

An entertainment which comprises a play presented by local talent, followed by a dance, is always very popular, and the one to be given in the Town Hall next Thursday evening promises to be particularly so. The play, "For One Night Only," will first be given, and a dance lasting till one o'clock will follow. As the price of tickets, admitting to both, is only fifty cents, and the play is to be presented by a strong cast, the tickets have found a ready sale. A few tickets are still to be had at Whittemore's drug store.

This morning there was opened in Swan's Block a new meat and provision store. The proprietors are Johnson and Maisch. Mr. Johnson has had twenty years' experience in the meat business, and for years has been head man at Ward's market in Cambridgeport. Mr. Maisch is a practical man at meats, having been steward in some of our largest hotels, and the past season has been head steward at Lake Champlain, Clinton Co., N. Y. They will carry a full line of meat, poultry and game at Boston and Cambridge prices; also a fine line of fish and oysters. Give them a call.

Last Wednesday evening the Arlington Whist and Cycle Club had a ladies' night at their pleasant rooms in the Sherburne Block. The evening was spent in playing progressive whist. There was a large attendance. The evening was very socially spent, and it was demonstrated that these occasions were going to be very popular this winter with this club. The lady's prize was won by Mrs. Thomas G. Kaulbeck, and the gentleman's prize was won by Mr. Everett S. Chapman. For a place to enjoy one's self and pass the time playing pool or other games this club offers great inducements to any and all who wish to join. Its members are from the best citizens of the town.

For once the ladies connected with the Samaritan Society of the Universalist Church were fortunate in having a pleasant evening for the supper and entertainment which they had planned for Nov. 8th, under the name of "A Peace Supper." A large number sat down to the bountiful supper provided by the ladies of the committee, after which a patriotic entertainment was given consisting of tableaux representing scenes in the Spanish-American war, the one entitled "The Army and Navy" being a prime favorite. Mr. William Burton Robinson sang two solos, "Thy Sentinel" and "Palm Branches" with great effect, both selections being encored. A quartette consisting of Miss Carrie Higgins, Mrs. H. A. Leeds, Mr. H. A. Leeds and Mr. James O. Holt gave "Angel of Peace," and Miss Higgins rendered "The Star Spangled Banner" in a most acceptable manner, being forced to respond to an encore.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the motor carriage race at the Charles River Park last Wednesday.

Don't forget to attend the adjourned town meeting Tuesday. Every voter should be out and vote on the articles relative to the new boulevard, and see whether or no the town can afford to have it just now. All turn out!

It seems strange to us that the town societies will go to other places to procure music for dancing when we have in our midst a man, who is an expert in music, is classed high in the profession and is eagerly sought after by publishers to furnish them with compositions. We refer to Prof. Bendix of 2 Park terrace. He has led some of the finest orchestras in the United States, and played in some of the finest theatres and dances on the globe. We know it would pay a society to procure his services, for when once tried no one will be without him.

An unusually large number of members and friends of the Baptist Society attended the social held in the vestry of the church last Wednesday evening, and as many as two hundred people were seated around the tables when Rev. Mr. Yeames of St. John's Episcopal Church invoked the divine blessing. After ample justice had been done to the good things spread before them, the company was called to order by Dr. Watson, the pastor of the church, who, in a few well chosen words, welcomed those present in the name of the society and presented the principal speaker of the evening, the Rev. C. C. Earle of the Harvard Street Baptist Church of Boston.

Mr. Earle spoke in a humorous vein of social work in the church, telling many witty stories to illustrate his points, but at no time losing sight of the more serious side of this important question. Mr. E. Nelson Blake, superintendent of the Sunday School being called upon, discussed the work being done in this line by the various churches of the town, and made the astounding statement that there were between 700 and 800 children in town who were not regular attendants of any Sunday School. Vocal solos by Mrs. Smith and Mr. Rosenbeck were much enjoyed by the audience, the latter especially making a strong impression by his fine rendition of his selection. The church quartette also contributed three numbers to the program. All musical numbers being accompanied by Mr. W. E. Wood at the piano.

Mr. Watson ended the speaking for the evening, summing up in a few moments what his predecessors had said. After the conclusion of the formal portion of the entertainment, the remainder of the evening was spent in greeting old and new friends, and in general sociality.

One of the pleasantest church gatherings of the season was held in the vestry of the Pleasant Street Congregational Church last Wednesday, it being the evening for the regular church social. The ladies from the sewing society having the matter in charge provided an appetizing supper, and there were a large number present to enjoy it.

After the tables were cleared away an entertainment was given by local talent, as follows. First a dialogue entitled "Advertising for a wife" in which Mr. E. L. Churchill took the part of the discouraged bachelor reduced to this means of obtaining a helpmate, while Col. Walker acted as his slave. The fair applicants for the position were represented by seven young ladies of the society. Following this came a series of shadow pantomimes entitled: 1—Home Amusements. 2—Don't cut off your nose to spite your face. 3—Caught in the Act. 4—Triumphs of Modern Dentistry. 5—Setting the hen.

This last proved to be the undoubted success of the evening, and furnished unlimited amusement to the spectators. The affair concluded with the reading of a miscellaneous poem which caused uproarious laughter. The ladies of the supper committee were Mrs. Myron Taylor, chairman, Mrs. Dr. Reed, Mrs. Rholf, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Churchill, Mrs. Abbie Taylor, Mrs. Prince, Mrs. Walter Frost, Mrs. Holt, and Mrs. Fiske. Mrs. E. L. Churchill was the chairman of the entertainment committee.

WOMAN'S CLUB.

The club opened with a full attendance and it was gratifying to note the steady growth indicated by the eighteen new applicants for membership.

The folios containing the programs for the year are ready for distribution and can be obtained at the club meetings at the door.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday, Nov. 17. Prof. Cummings, of Harvard, will be the speaker for the afternoon. Subject, "Domestic Service in Relation to the Industrial Problem."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.

Rev. Mr. Stenbridge's poor health still continues.

The sewer department still continues its activity at Florence avenue.

Preaching at Crescent Hall tomorrow at 3.30 and 7.30 p. m.

We understand Mr. J. O. S. Hillard and daughter will take a trip to Tropical, Cal.

The Bayville Whist Club was entertained by Miss Edith Kendall at her home on Claremont avenue. Silver prizes.

The friends of Mr. P. D. Durling, the popular clerk at Mr. Sloan's store, enjoyed themselves at a party at his house Monday evening. Refreshments were served, and music was interspersed.

Following is a list of the officers elected by the Crescent Hill Club Monday evening last: J. Kirshmayr, president; J. H. Loran, vice president; W. J. McAllister, secretary; J. T. Luce, treasurer; J. Kirshmayr, J. T. Luce, F. M. Goodwillie, C. H. Kenney, C. A. Cushing, H. Jukes, H. R. Brown, trustees.

We record this week the death of Miss Rebecca E. Stone of 11 Ashland street, and known as Aunt Beccy by her relatives and friends. Her death occurred on the 3d instant, and her age was over 77 years. For years she has been deprived of this world's pleasures, having been an invalid. After the funeral services from her late home the remains were taken to Salem for burial. Rev. R. E. Ely officiated. She leaves a sister, Mrs. H. E. Bascomb.

The harvest services at the Park Avenue Church, by the children, was very interesting. The decorations were elaborate and pretty. Hydrangers, stacked bunches of rye and autumn leaves were on the platform. Mr. Ely made a few remarks on Thanksgiving. Master Willie Partridge gave a recitation on autumn, and other parts were given by the primary class, and Misses Gertie Nicoll and Mamie Frazier.

Miss Margaret W. Leitch who has been a missionary for ten years in Ceylon, and who is now an honorary collector for the forward movement of the American Board, will speak in the Park Avenue church, Arlington Heights, on next Sabbath evening, Nov. 13. At 6 p. m. she will lead the regular meeting of the C. E. Society, and at 7.15 p. m. she will speak in the church. At this latter service she will give an account of the daily life, manners, customs and religions of the people of Ceylon and southern India, and the triumphs of the Gospel among them. Her address will be illustrated by 100 beautiful views shown by the aid of the stereopticon. These views, which have been collected by her for the past ten years, are made from photographs and beautifully colored. They will give a vivid idea of the daily life of the people on the other side of the world, and the spiritual uplift which has come to them through the agency of American missionaries. All are cordially invited. Admission free. Collection will be at the close in aid of the Parsonage fund of the church. This meeting is held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Park Avenue Church.

Chinese Drugs.

The employees in the office of the appraiser of customs were busy examining a shipment of Chinese medicines, and the place smelled like a fertilizer factory.

There were the usual number of dried snakes, the looks of which would be certain to kill or cure any intelligent patient. There were also a number of plump lizards, spitted on rods and expanded with slips of bamboo till they resembled tennis rackets; a lot of "sea horses," a long, slender fish, with a head like a horse and a prehensile tail; bundles of centipeds flattened out and pasted on sticks; cans full of preserved polliwogs and angleworms and many other curious panaceas, each of which smelled worse than the other. There were pills as large as prunes, handsomely decorated; roots and "yarks" of many kinds, which would paralyze a Quaker doctor, and boxes and bottles of unknown mixtures which would paralyze anybody.

The 40 separate and distinct smells of the town of Cologne are nothing as compared to the odors arising from about $100 worth of Chinese medicine, which made some of the men handling the stuff sick. Foul smell seems to be a requisite in most medicines, and if the beneficial effects of medicine are proportionate to its odor the medicines of the Chinese should be the best in the world.—Portland Oregonian.

Indifferent as to the Kind.

He was a fragile youth and didn't dance all the dances.

"Let's sit it out," he said to his pretty partner.

"Where?" she asked.

"On the stairs."

So they went up a little way and sat down.

"Wh-why, what's the matter, Mr. Stackpole?" cried the fair young girl, for the young man had hastily risen and was gasping for breath. He could not reply. His face was livid. His eyes were rolled up, and with one shaking hand he clawed feebly at the skirts of his tuxedo.

"What kind of an attack is it?" she gasped.

At this question his voice came back to him.

"What difference does that make?" he harshly growled. Then, without a word of apology, he dashed up the stairs and flung himself into the men's coatroom.

And how was she to know that it was an ordinary carpet tack that the man who canvased the stairs had carelessly left standing on its head?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dickens and His Cat.

Charles Dickens was a lover of cats. He owned a large white one named Williamina, who selected a corner of his study for her kittens and brought them in from the kitchen one by one. Dickens had them taken away again, but Williamina persisted in bringing them back. The third time of their removal she did not leave them in the corner, but instead placed them at her master's feet and, taking her stand beside them, looked imploringly up at him. Most of the family were finally given away. Only one remained. The little creature followed Dickens about like a dog and sat beside him while he wrote.

One evening the author was reading at a small table upon which was a lighted candle. As usual the cat was at his elbow. Suddenly the light went out. Dickens was much interested in his book and relighted the candle. It was only when the light became dim again that he turned suddenly and found the kitten deliberately putting the light out with her paw. She was lonely, she wanted to be petted, and this was her device for bringing it about.

Overruled in Rhyme.

In a Georgia court not long since a case involving a jackass came on for trial. The attorneys after indulging in a fine frenzy entered the following inspired motion on the docket:

"If the court will consent, we will take up a case; It treats not of section, country or race; It is of no interest to any, be it ladies or lass— It begins and it ends with a humble jackass."

Thereupon the judge, hastily summoning his muse to his assistance, entered up the following order:

"This case coming on this day to be heard (Considered by the court to be quite absurd), And the motion herein the court doth decide To be hereby overruled and denied, And the movers thereof shall not be exempt From a fine of one dollar each for contempt, Wherein, until paid, the court further passes, As sentence, that they be deemed said jackasses."

—Law Notes.

Paying Through the Nose.

This is to be indirectly swindled in a transaction or to pay an exorbitant price for a thing in consideration of long credit. A variant is "to be bored through the nose," "bored" here having the meaning of cheated, deceived.

At this instant he bores me with some trick.—Henry VIII., I. i. 128.

One that hath galled you, that hath bored you, sir.—"Life of T. Cromwell," 1002, II. ii. 103.

And Howell in his "Instructions For Forren Travell" (1650), page 59, "had known divers Dutch gentlemen grossly gild by this cheat [the selling of forged manuscripts to young travelers in Italy], and some English bor'd also through the nose this way, by paying excessive prices for them."—Notes and Queries.

Theaters in Spain.

Theaters in Spain have no programmes. A bill in the lobby sometimes gives the cast, but most of the actors remain unknown by name. The curtain is devoted to advertisements, and in Madrid theaters advertising cards are affixed with the numbers on the back of each seat.

On Wednesday evening Mr. William Burton Robinson gave songs and readings at his home on Academy street to a large gathering of friends. Miss M.
E. Ball of Cambridge gave readings of a high order, and delighted those present.
Mr. Robinson, of course, sang in his usual highly pleasing rendition a number of pieces, and was most ably supported by Mrs. Robinson as accompanist. The evening was pleasantly spent and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson made the evening an enjoyable one.

LEXINGTON.

"Brownie Ball" was produced in Village Hall, East Lexington, Thursday evening, under the direction of the author and composer, Mr. Alonzo A. Cole.
The principle parts were assumed by King Pomeroy, Chester Lawrence, Clifford Stone, Edna Locke, and Mildred Caldwell. The musical numbers, which were very bright and pleasing, were well rendered. Miss Bertha E. Stone was the accompanist. Mr. Carlton A.
Childs proved a most efficient stage manager.

The paper read by Miss Baldwin last Tuesday evening, at Hancock Church
in the Tourist Club course, was instruc-

NEW WINTER COSTUMES.

FASHIONS OF NEW YORK

New Fur Garments Are Very Pretty and Very Costly.

ASTRAKHAN IS TO BE POPULAR.

The Richest Thing in a Winter Wrap
Is a Pelisse Made Entirely of Different Kinds of Fur—About Ostrich Feathers and Bonnets.

[Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.]

Furs are paramount. Any woman who has no fur garment of any kind is defrauded of her rights. If there is any who has not even a collar, she is to be pitied.

Not that fur garments are really so warm, or if they are warm that they are really comfortable in themselves. It is because they are costly and are becoming and seasonable.

In very truth a fur cape is warm only on the shoulders. Under the arms and around the waist one may suffer from the cold. A jacket or any kind of fitted fur garment is all well enough when it is bitterly cold, but in our changeable climate
the wearer is half suffocated with heat fully half her time. And all for what?
Solely and simply to be admired in a fur garment. By the same token will a woman freeze herself in low cut bodices with no sleeves to speak of on winter nights at the grand social functions requiring full dress. Woman's inconsistency passeth understanding—mine at least.

To return to the fur garments, seal is the choice fur of this season. The demand is fully up to the supply. Many imitations are on the market, but none is really worthy of purchase. There are numberless variations in victorines and collarettes of sealskin, some entirely of the rich fur and others having borders of other. The most often astrakhan or skunk.

That poor, despised animal furnishes us
with one of the softest and most elegant furs we have. The pile is from an inch and a half to two inches thick and is soft
and dark and glossy, and there are lights
in the fibers under the sunshine that adapt it to any color or any fabric. It is quite as handsome on a rich white satin evening wrap or even edging a gown as it is on a sealskin cape or a long cloth pelisse. It is lovely on a hat. It is more elegantly called Alaska sable.

There are long capes of rich sealskin
with a serpentine flounce of the same, or of sable, or of one of the other shaded brown furs but none is so handsome as the all seal. They fall in the back in a superb sweep and close at the neck with gift ornaments. The collars are most often the high medall variety, often crenelated
and with the tabs bound with other fur or wired.

Many of the collarettes are of light cloth,
cream or white, with the edges ruffled with fur and the high collar bound with fur. A whole bunch of tails is set in the front like a jabot tie. Some collarettes have stole ends with tails as long as fringe.
Velours du nord makes very pretty collarettes, with borderings of fur all around and a bunch of tails, and perhaps a cut little head at the throat in place of clasps.
Plucked and clipped raccoon skin resembles beaver very closely, and is a very durable fur. It is soft and a delicate drab in color. It is not very expensive in itself, but by the time it is lined with handsome silk or satin and bordered with skunk or mink or marten it becomes so very rich
and elegant that the furriers think it far too pretty to sell cheap, and women will pay anything to get it.

One of the features of the season in fur is the all fur pelisse. These are made of marten, caracul, astrakhan and seal. They reach to the bottom of the dress, and are princess shape in the back and overcoat shape in front. Some are double and some single breasted. Large buttons fasten them. The sleeves are coat form, with long narrow wrists, and are as small as they can be made, so that the dress sleeve may enter. These pelisses are lined throughout with handsome brocades in light color, and they are magnificent,
though rather heavy; but what woman
would not make a suffering martyr of herself by wearing one?

In one of the swiftest of the swell fur-rier's stores I saw a pelisse of tan colored woolly cloth made for all the world like a princess wrapper except that directly in front of the waist the material was gathered in three broken folds; very graceful
it was too. The sleeves had short "sprung" caps bound with inch wide bands of skunk.
The bishop sleeves had two rows of the fur around the band and the high crenelated medall collar was likewise bound with it. The pelisse closed at the left side invisibly under a band of the fur, which extended from top to bottom. It was lined throughout with rich black satin. The effect was unusual, but fine. When I said tan, I did not fully define the color. It was more like the lightest shade of chamol leather, and indeed this peculiar weave of brocade cloth has a finish as soft and velvety

as chamol.

The same general style of long cloak or pelisse was developed in the new purple;
also in black. A few of these have immense shawl collars of rich fur and deep cuffs of the same. Muffs are made to match each fur cape, collar, or long mantle or pelisse. The muffs are made both plain and ornamental. Bunches of violets are sewed to some of them.

Astrakhan and persian will both be much worn this winter, both curled and moire. There is much creamy white astrakhan and gray. These, with the black,
are much fancied by young ladies who are having blouses made of it.

The blouses are very stylish. Most of them have short basques below the belt.
The back fits easily and the fronts pouch very little. They are arranged so that lapels can turn back if desired, and the front is then open over some kind of a vest. The collar is high, but arranged so that it can lie flat when the blouse is open. This is a good and sensible plan, so that as the temperature changes the garment can be changed as well. Gold belts are worn with these fur blouses—or what passes for gold belts. It is expected that there will be much velvet worn this season for outdoor costumes where fine dressing is suitable—skating, among them.
Velutina in all the richer colors will be cut in the same general style as governs other outdoor costumes. But nearly all velvet gowns and capes to match will be trimmed with chinchilla. This fur is so fine and close and so softly shaded in its dusty gray
that it harmonizes with all colors as no other fur does, not even skunk. This will be so largely used as garnitures that one wonders where all the little animals are found. Even tailor gowns will be trimmed in that way.

Some of these, notably gray suits—and

gray in all shades is extremely fashionable —have entire collars, cuffs and lapels of chinchilla. Bands of this fur will be seen on so many costumes that one cannot mention them all, and they will not all be for the street either. Cunning little toques are made of chinchilla and other fine furs and made smart by a few mottled quills matching the shades.

Cloth costumes are always elegant, and they are exceptionally so, it seems, this year. The dark, warm nutty browns are very beautiful, especially when in the satin faced broadcloths. One in this material had a plain skirt, a tight postilion basque and a fitted cape with a deep flounce at the bottom. This flounce was covered with brown silk embroidery. A gray cloth tailor suit was extremely refined and elegant.
The skirt had several rows of close tailor stitching around the bottom and up the front side breadth. A bias fold of velvet three shades darker was laid between the stitching and the side seam. The jacket was scalloped front and back and stitched,
The jacket closed at the left side with frogs and loops. The collar points were covered with the velvet, and the bias band
was put between the stitching and closing,
forming a beautiful line along the closing.

Among the walking costumes there are many where the skirt and coat differ entirely. A glance at the illustration will show this, and also the two last mentioned designs. A three-quarter jacket is made of cloth, velvet, repped silk or Irish poplin
and richly lined with satin brocade and warmly interlined. Across the shoulders is a collar of the same material closely braided with fine silk soutache. This reaches to the waist. A band of mink fur borders the medall collar and extends down the fronts.

Tan, drab and mode kersey make handsome jackets, though they are not so dressy as black silk or velvet ones. Still they are more suitable for young persons. They are braided richly and bordered with fur.
They need a trim figure to look well. In one instance a drab jacket of this description was worn over a Lincoln green diagonal chevot, made with an apron flounce.
Moire velours in shades of purple and black made an elegant skirt to wear with a black one.

Hats and bonnets put the poor fashion writer in despair. There are so many and all so different and each so pretty that a barrel of ink could not do them justice.
There are some so large that it is wonderful how the wearers keep them on and others scarcely larger than the palm of your hand.

Besides so many ostrich feathers on the most elegant hats, ostrich boas are very fashionable. The proper length is a yard and a quarter. Black coq boas are much favored, and they are pretty, but nothing can give them the superb beauty of the ostrich plume. I noticed on one hat a whole lot of little rosettes, like chrysanthemums, made of ostrich feathers. They were pretty.
